

Dear Corporate Warrior Princess

Do not forget that
Ambition and eyeliner should both be winged.
Remember that a singing sword fits your hand as well as a scepter,
And that these metaphors are tired.
Goddesses can step a brave beat
In high heels
Or bare feet.
Treat your lavender kindly
In rows as orderly as your Excel spreadsheet.
Be wary of the man who just wants to check your data
As a favor, you know,
Over a caramel macchiato.
Dig in your stiletto.
The blade came before the shoe
And they will feel both in the dance done over all
Who would dare steal from you.
Sage your office space regularly
And blow a kiss to the moon.
She will gladly serve as a reference for all you do.
Professional woman,
Tread with purpose and with care.
Do not forget to let the divine in
To purify stale corporate air.